Source text unreadable: no news item can be drafted

The source supplied for this item arrived as corrupted, unreadable text. Its content cannot be verified, so no article has been drafted. Please resend the source text.

- The source body arrived as corrupted characters.
- Only the headline and URL are readable.
- Facts cannot be confirmed from the headline alone.
- The item is held until a clean copy is supplied.

What happened

The source text provided for this item could not be read. The article body arrived as corrupted characters, so none of its details can be confirmed.

What we can say

The headline refers to a report that the FBI was hacked again, with a nationwide police database reportedly targeted. The headline alone does not tell us what was accessed, who was behind it, when it happened, or how it was confirmed. We have not filled those gaps with assumptions.

Next step

To keep our newsroom accurate, we are not publishing details we cannot verify. Please resend the source article as plain text, or confirm the original link, so the item can be drafted from facts the source actually states. Until then, no guidance is issued for regulated institutions in the Kingdom, since any advice would depend on details we do not have.